Attention Videographers and Photographers: Announcing The Most Important Contest ...
You'll Ever Enter Before You Shoot Your Next Film!

Small HD is pulling back the curtains and unveiling their contest. They invite videographers and photographers to join in on a fun challenge that demonstrates the bone crushing strength of the DP1.

“When you work in the field as a professional, it’s not only important for a monitor to allow you to shoot precision footage, but it must also be rugged. While some other monitors are large, clunky, and cheap feeling, making you so frustrated you are ready to run over it, we decided to park a land rover on ours. Actually, we did this to test the durability of our DP1. After our test, our mighty DP1 worked perfectly without even a scratch. Next, just for kicks, we turned our test into a contest,” says Dale Backus at Small HD.

If you are the first person who guesses the weight of the land rover on the DP1 monitor, you win yourself a FREE ultra light, HD DP1 field monitor that is virtually indestructible. As many of you had already purchased the DP1, if you win the contest, you will receive a full refund for your money. Cast only one entry per participant. Small HD reveals the winner on December 15, 2009. No purchase is necessary to play.

To enter the contest and view the astounding image of hefty land rover standing on top of the DP1 go directly online at www.WinDP1.com.

The inventors of the DP1 are Wess Phillips and Dale Backus. These guys know first-hand the struggle of capturing good video footage the first time, every time. They searched the planet to find a quality monitor at a fair price, and struck out. With tenacity, they stepped up to the plate and knocked it out of the park by figuring out a way to combine the best LCD technology using a sleek, sexy design for a one third the price of comparable products. They call their grand slam invention the DP1.

Prior to this, Wes and Dale put their creative genius together to produce the winning Frito Lay commercial shown during the 2009 Super Bowl.
